Contributors to this issue:

CATHERINE GALLAGHER AND THOMAS LAQUEUR are co-chairs of the Representations editorial board.

CAROL J. CLOVER is Professor in the departments of Scandinavian and Rhetoric and the program in Film Studies at Berkeley. She has written books and articles on the literature and culture of early northern Europe. She has also written a book and articles on American film (horror, black-face musical, courtroom drama). Her book in progress, The People's Plot: Film and the Adversarial Imagination (Princeton), is on the ways the Anglo-American trial has given rise and shape to some of the most distinctive types of Anglo-American narrative entertainment.

WILLIAM IAN MILLER is Thomas G. Long Professor of Law at the University of Michigan. He is the author, most recently, of Eye for an Eye and Faking It.

ROBERTA FRANK, Douglas Tracy Smith Professor of English at Yale University, writes on and teaches Old English and Old Norse language and literature. She was for many years (for almost as long as she has known Carol) at the English Department and Centre for Medieval Studies at the University of Toronto.

THOMAS BREDSORFF is Emeritus Professor of Scandinavian Literature at the University of Copenhagen.

FRANCES FERGUSON's most recent book is Pornography, the Theory: What Utilitarianism Did to Action (University of Chicago, 2004). She is currently at work on a book on eighteenth- and early nineteenth-century accounts of education.

JAMES SCHAMUS is an Academy Award-nominated screenwriter and producer (Crouching Tiger, Hidden Dragon, Brokeback Mountain), the CEO of Focus Features (The Pianist, Eternal Sunshine of the Spotless Mind), and Associate Professor in the School of the Arts at Columbia University.
