Contributors to this issue:

C. D. BLANTON is Associate Professor of English at the University of California, Berkeley. He is the author of Epic Negation: The Dialectical Poetics of Late Modernism (Oxford, forthcoming) and co-editor of two volumes on postwar poetry: Pocket Epics: British Poetry After Modernism (Yale Journal of Criticism) and A Concise Companion to Postwar British and Irish Poetry (Blackwell).

COLLEEN LYE is Associate Professor of English at the University of California, Berkeley. She is the author of America's Asia: Racial Form and American Literature, 1893–1945 (Princeton, 2005) and, most recently, coeditor of Peripheral Realisms, a special issue of Modern Language Quarterly (2012) and The Humanities and the Crisis of the Public University, a special issue of Representations (2011).

KENT PUCKETT is Associate Professor of English at the University of California, Berkeley, and author of Bad Form: Social Mistakes and the Nineteenth-Century Novel (Oxford, 2008). He is at work on two projects: one on close reading and another on British war cinema.

JOSHUA CLOVER's present work revolves around political economy and forms of revolutionary struggle, including the co-authored "Can Dialectics Break BRICS?" (an assessment of class composition and communist party possibilities in emerging economies, with Aaron Benanav), forthcoming in South Atlantic Quarterly, and the Little Book of Riot, forthcoming from UC Press. He is a Professor of English at the University of California, Davis; in 2015, he will convene a Residential Research Group at the UC Humanities Research Institute, studying "Culture, Industry, Finance."

ANNIE McCLANAHAN is an Assistant Professor of English at University of Wisconsin-Milwaukee. She is currently completing two book projects: Dead Pledges: Debt, Crisis, and 21st-Century Culture, and a co-authored book on theories of capitalist crisis.

BISHNUPRIYA GHOSH teaches postcolonial theory, literature, and global media studies in the English Department of the University of California, Santa Barbara. She is currently working on two monographs on speculative knowledge and globalization: The Unhomely Sense: Spectral Cinemas of Globalization, and The Virus Touch: Living with Epidemics.

JOSEPH JONGHYUN JEON is an Associate Professor of English and Asian American studies at Pomona College. He is the author of Racial Things, Racial Forms: Objecthood in Avant-Garde Asian American Poetry (Iowa, 2012).

MICHAEL SZALAY teaches fiction and television at the University of California, Irvine, where he directs the Center for the Study of Creative Economies. He's the author of New Deal Modernism: American Literature and the Invention of the Welfare State and Hip Figures: A Literary History of the Democratic Party.

PETER HITCHCOCK is Professor of English at the Graduate Center and Baruch College of the City University of New York. He is also on CUNY's faculty of the Certificate Programs in Film Studies and Women's Studies at the Graduate Center and Associate Director of its Center for Place, Culture, and Politics. His books include The Long Space: Transnationalism and Postcolonial Form; Imaginary States: Studies in Cultural Transnationalism; Oscillate Wildly: Space, Body, and Spirit of Millennial Materialism; and Dialogics of the Oppressed. He is currently working on a manuscript called "Trading Objects," which juxtaposes commodity critique with analyses of financial instruments.
