Contributors to this issue:

VANESSA R. SCHWARTZ directs the Visual Studies Research Institute at the University of Southern California, where she teaches the history of modern visual culture, especially photography and film, and the history and theories of popular and mass culture in the departments of art history and history. She recently completed a book, Jet Age Aesthetics: The Glamour of Media in Motion, which will be published by Yale University Press in 2020.

DANIELA BLEICHMAR is Professor in the departments of art history and history at the University of Southern California. She is the author of Visible Empire: Botanical Expeditions and Visual Culture in the Hispanic Enlightenment (2012) and Visual Voyages: Images of Latin American Nature from Columbus to Darwin (2017). Her current research addresses indigenous objects and knowledge in colonial Mexico and early modern Europe.

RANDALL MEISSEN is a PhD candidate in history at the University of Southern California and predoctoral fellow at the USC-Huntington Early Modern Studies Institute. He has held short-term fellowships at the Huntington Library; the John Carter Brown Library; and the Center for Medieval and Renaissance Studies at Saint Louis University.

EVONNE LEVY is Professor of Early Modern Art History at the University of Toronto. She works on the art, architecture, and historiography of the baroque in Europe and Latin America.

SUSAN L. SIEGFRIED is Denise Riley Collegiate Professor of the History of Art and Women's Studies at the University of Michigan. She is completing a book on visual representations of fashion and costume in nineteenth-century Europe.

ALLAN DOYLE is an art historian whose research focuses on the representation of history in nineteenth-century French art and visual culture. He is currently finishing a book on the afterlife of Michelangelo Buonarroti in French Romantic painting.

BILLIE MELMAN is Professor of Modern History at Tel Aviv University. She has written extensively on colonialism and culture, orientalism, and cross-cultural relations in the age of modern empires. She is completing a book on modernity, the rediscovery of antiquity, and imperial crisis during the first half of the twentieth century.

AARON RICH is a PhD candidate in the division of Cinema and Media Studies in the University of Southern California's School of Cinematic Arts. He is working on a dissertation entitled "The Hollywood Research Library: Visual Knowledge in the Republic of Images."
