Contributors to this issue:

ALINE GUILLERMET is a Junior Research Fellow at King's College, University of Cambridge. Her research interests include postwar German art, the impact of technology on painting, and digital art. She is currently completing a book on Gerhard Richter.

KENT PUCKETT teaches at the University of California, Berkeley, and is the author of Bad Form: Social Mistakes and the Nineteenth-Century Novel (Oxford, 2008), Narrative Theory: A Critical Introduction (Cambridge, 2016), and War Pictures: Cinema, Style, and Violence in Britain, 1939–1945 (Fordham, 2017). He is writing a book about the aesthetics of electoral modeling.

RYAN HEALEY is a doctoral candidate in English at New York University. His research investigates eighteenth-century finance and the structure of quantum information.

EWAN JONES is University Lecturer in the Nineteenth Century at the Faculty of English, University of Cambridge. He is the author of Coleridge and the Philosophy of Poetic Form (Cambridge, 2014) and is currently writing a monograph on the history of the concept of rhythm.

PAUL NULTY is a Marie Skłodowska-Curie Career-FIT Research Fellow at the National Centre for Applied Data Analytics and Machine Intelligence (CeADAR), University College Dublin, Ireland. He previously worked on the Concept Lab project at Cambridge University, and his research focuses on applications of natural language processing to problems in social science and the humanities.

GABRIEL RECCHIA is a Research Associate at the Winton Centre for Risk and Evidence Communication at the University of Cambridge. His background is in cognitive science and in computational approaches to natural language processing such as distributional modeling, which he is currently applying at the Winton Centre to better understand how risk is communicated and perceived.

JOHN REGAN is a lecturer in Literature and the Digital at Royal Holloway, University of London. He is the author of Poetry and the Idea of Progress, 1760–1790 and is currently writing a book investigating the historical development of knowledge structures in the Anglophone eighteenth century.

PETER DE BOLLA is Professor of Cultural History and Aesthetics at the University of Cambridge, where he also directed the Cambridge Concept Lab. His most recent monograph is The Architecture of Concepts: The Historical Formation of Human Rights (Fordham, 2013), and he is currently writing a book on the artist Pierre Bonnard.

ANDREW J. COUNTER is Associate Professor of French at the University of Oxford and the author of Inheritance in Nineteenth-Century French Culture: Wealth, Knowledge and the Family (Legenda, 2010) and The Amorous Restoration: Love, Sex and Politics in Early Nineteenth-Century France (Oxford, 2016). His current book project is provisionally entitled Thinking Sexual Ethics with Modern French Literature.

WHITNEY DAVIS is Pardee Professor of History and Theory of Ancient and Modern Art and Chair of the Department of History of Art at the University of California, Berkeley. His most recent book is Visuality and Virtuality: Images and Pictures from Prehistory to Perspective (Princeton, 2017).
